CTC@Robertson and The Robertson SHED Inc.

The Robertson Community Technology Centre (CTC@Robertson) is a multi-function centre managed by a not-for-profit community organisation (The Robertson Shed Inc.). Our aim is to create and maintain a welcoming hub for people who live, work and visit Robertson and the Southern Highlands. The centre provides facilities and enriching experiences in IT, arts, education, business and commerce, social and cultural fields. CTC@Robertson is managed by a volunteer committee and two part-time managers. The centre offers volunteering work experience for about 20 locals, from teenagers to adults and seniors.

The CTC@Robertson building was completed in April 2004. It was financed from two separate grants from Federal Government programs. The community technology centre is funded from a separate two year grant from NSW State and Commonwealth governments. The centre belongs to a network of CTCs in New South Wales.

High speed internet access and training program

CTC@Robertson runs a training program consisting of courses ranging from basic computer skills to more advanced IT skills, multimedia, general interest courses and workshops. The centre can also find trainers to suit the needs of individual study groups, associations or conference organisers.

The IT training room of the CTC has 6 networked PCs, while the multimedia room has two Macintosh computers, including a Powermac complete with photo and video editing software.

The customers of the CTC have access to high speed Internet. Fees for internet use and workstation hire are very reasonable, with reduced fees for concession card holders.

From Summer 2005, the IT training room hosts regular network games nights for the young.
